This series aims to foster interconnections and to create a multidisciplinary community around global citizenship education (GCE) issues, including debates around global education and learning, development education and education for sustainable development. Published in close cooperation with the world-leading Development Education Research Centre (DERC) at the UCL Institute of Education, UK, it addresses and explores the concept of GCE within a broad multidisciplinary focus and invites a wide international authorship through which diverse voices and perspectives can be heard.

In particular the series includes three broad strands of research:

- theoretical and/or conceptual research
- wide ranging empirical research
- high quality and rigorous comparative and cross-cultural research.
