Pedagogy Of Hope And Global Social Justice

Call for submissions

This year's ANGEL conference, to be held online on the 25, 26 & 27th May 2021, will offer a mixture of plenary sessions, workshops, paper presentations, and networking for global education professionals.

We are calling for submission of abstracts for the paper presentation session, scheduled for Wednesday 26th May, 13:30 (GMT). Your submission should demonstrate a connection or relevance to the conference Theme, Aims, or Topics as mentioned below, and / or a connection with Global Education and Learning. Please note that the session is intended to showcase the work of emerging or early career researchers (completed PhD in last 5 years, or current doctoral student), so priority will be given to such applications.

Event theme

As the Covid-19 pandemic begins to ebb, it feels as if hope, and a sense of possibility, is returning to our communities. We wanted the overall Theme of our event to reflect this, so we encourage you to guide your contributions to this year's gathering by considering a 'Pedagogy Of Hope And Global Social Justice'.

Event aims

- To review and reflect upon the role of global learning and global citizenship education in providing visions of hope for social change
- To discuss the role of global social justice as a pedagogical approach in response to the challenges and inequalities in the world identified from COVID-19

Key topics

- Challenges for global learning and global citizenship education post COVID-19.
- Providing visions and ways forward for learning about global themes
- Lessons from research in schools or other settings on the most effective ways to engage learners in playing a positive role in shaping a more just and sustainable world
- Contribution of higher education to building a pedagogy of hope and global social justice
- Role of civil society organisations in equipping learners with the knowledge, skills and values to take action on social justice and sustainability issues

Proceedings

We plan to publish something based on the conference. Please indicate during the application process whether you are interested in your research being included.
