

Advances in Global Citizenship Education Policy and Practice

SERIES EDITORS: Massimiliano Tarozzi, Nicole Blum, and Clare Bentall (UCL Institute of Education, UK)

Dear colleague,

We are pleased to invite you to consider publishing your work in the new academic book series Advances in Global Citizenship Education Policy and Practice, published by Bloomsbury Academic Publishing.

The series aims to explore Global Citizenship Education through a broad multidisciplinary focus and to promote a wide international authorship which will increase the degree to which diverse voices and perspectives are heard.

With this academic endeavor we aim to foster interconnections and to create a very diverse community around Global Citizenship Education and related areas of research, policy and practice. The Editors are based in the Development Education Research Centre (UCL Institute of Education), a world-leading hub for research and teaching in Development Education, Global Learning and Global Citizenship, and will draw on the Centre's expertise as well as a large network of collaborators to support the series.

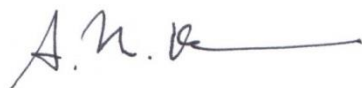

This series addresses and explores issues of research, policy and practice in GCE and welcomes high quality book proposals, within three broad strands:

1. Theoretical / conceptual research. This includes comprehensive theoretical monographs which provide conceptual analyses around GCE and related areas. These might also be intended for use as textbooks in post-graduate courses and doctoral programmes.
2. Wide-ranging empirical research. This includes new or previously unpublished research from the field. This work might be rooted in education research or take a broader interdisciplinary/ trans-disciplinary approach. Large scale research conducted as part of a doctoral thesis is also welcome under this heading.
3. Comparative and cross-cultural research. This includes high quality, rigorous work from a range of diverse perspectives. Work which brings in voices from the Global South is particularly welcome.

The series publishes monographs and edited volumes, but with an emphasis on single-authored books which provide a singular, coherent, cohesive take on an approach/topic). Edited collections are considered for those topics where a coherent range of views or perspectives on the issue would be beneficial. The average length of manuscripts is 70,000-90,000 words. All manuscripts and their proposals will be peer reviewed.

Bloomsbury Publishing is an award-winning, innovative and global independent publisher, with strong global distribution and connections as a result of having offices in London, Oxford, New York, Sydney and New Delhi. In particular Bloomsbury's Academic Division stands for excellence and originality in scholarship, teaching, learning, and professional practice. Bloomsbury global sales and marketing team ensure its titles reach a worldwide market and are promoted at all major international scholarly and library conferences. The books would be displayed at CIES and at several other major international conferences including AERA, ECER and BERA. Finally, authors would be entitled to 40% discount off a range of Bloomsbury books (not only academic).

We are very keen to hear from you about ideas for new volumes in the series – either by yourself or by others in your networks, so please do get in touch.

For more information or to discuss an idea for a book in the series, please contact:

Series Editors:

Massimiliano Tarozzi - massimiliano.tarozzi@unibo.it

Nicole Blum - n.blum@ucl.ac.uk

Clare Bentall - c.bentall@ucl.ac.uk

Commissioning Editor:

Mark Richardson - mark.richardson@bloomsbury.com